

THE CORPORATE CHEAT CODE

MAKE $250K WITHOUT A DEGREE OR EXPERIENCE

PATRICK CADEI

MULTI-MILLIONAIRE AND 8-FIGURE BUSINESS OWNER

THE CORPORATE CHEAT CODE MAKE $250K WITHOUT A DEGREE OR EXPERIENCE

Hello bright-eyed, ambitious twenty-something. If you're reading this, it's probably because you're feeling stuck.

You're not sure if university is right for you, you don't want to spend decades climbing the corporate ladder, and aren't sold on a particular career path. What you are sure of, though, is that you want to become successful.

If that's the case, then you've come to the right place.

My name is Patrick – I'm a serial entrepreneur and multi-millionaire. I don't say that to brag. I say it because I want you to know I'm not some random guy without experience giving you advice. I've been in your shoes before and have since enjoyed a long and prosperous career.

Everything I'm about to reveal in this eBook has helped me go from a poor immigrant with just $500 in my pocket... to a successful entrepreneur with enough money to spend my days how I choose to spend them.

It took me many years to get where I am today. But I want you to do it in half the time (or less). So I've put together this guide that includes my top tips to fast-track your success.

HERE'S WHAT I'M GOING TO COVER:

The #1 high-value, recession-proof skill that'll have businesses crawling over crushed glass just to work with you (and how to master it for life, within just 30 days)

4 sentences you can say to ANY recruiter that'll have them eating out of the palm of your hand (even if your resume is empty except for a short stint at McDonald's)

The career path that's produced more billionaires than medicine, law and finance combined... rich listers like Mark Cuban say it's the #1 most important skill you need if you want to be successful

Why "just starting a business and becoming an entrepreneur" is the worst idea you've ever had... an idea that's responsible for leaving more people $10,000s in debt and depressed than it does success stories

The little-known 'shortcut' to earn up to $20,833+ per month working with top companies like Woolworths, Hello Fresh and Red Cross (you don't need a degree or corporate experience to do this!)

THE #1 HIGH-VALUE, RECESSION-PROOF SKILL THAT'LL HAVE BUSINESSES CRAWLING OVER CRUSHED GLASS JUST TO WORK WITH YOU

Everyone is talking about the 'R' word right now. I'm referring, of course, to a Recession.

Elon Musk said a recession is inevitable and will "more likely than not" happen soon. Billionaire investor Carl Icahn said a recession "or even worse" economic slowdown is on the horizon. Jeff Bezos proclaimed it's time to "batten down the hatches."

So if a recession is on the way... what can you do to prepare? How you can make sure you won't lose your job or be stuck on the unemployment line riding out the storm?

Simple. You can learn valuable skills that are vital even when the economy is struggling. In my opinion, and the opinion of just about every CEO and business owner I know, the most valuable skill you can learn is sales.

Without sales, a business cannot exist. Everyone else who works at the business – whether it's an accountant reporting income, an assembly worker putting together the product, or a cleaner mopping the floor – would have no reason to be there. As Henry Ford said, "nothing happens until someone sells something."

Now when most people think of sales, they picture a sleazy, manipulative car salesman who lies, cheats and steals just to make a few dollars. But what sales is really about is explaining the benefits of an action or decision to a consumer. And that is a crucial skill that becomes even more important during a recession.

P.S. you don't need a degree or corporate experience

That's because, during a recession, businesses become more focused on their bottom line and need to ensure that every dollar they spend is being used effectively. That's where sales comes in. A skilled salesperson can clearly communicate the value of a product or service and demonstrate how it can help the customer save money or solve a problem.

In fact, during a recession, companies rely on their sales teams more than ever to bring in new business and generate revenue. This means having strong sales skills not only makes you more employable, but also makes you more valuable to your current employer. You become a key player in keeping the business afloat during tough times when consumers are tightening their belts and spending less.

But learning how to sell is not just about recession-proofing your career. Sales is a skill that's always in demand. In fact, in a recent list published by LinkedIn of in-demand skills, some type of sales occupied 3 of the top 20 positions (including #2).

So if you're looking to future-proof your career and ensure you're always employable (even during a recession), then I HIGHLY recommend learning how to sell. How can you do it quickly and easily?

HERE ARE A FEW TIPS TO KICKSTART YOUR JOURNEY TO MASTERY:

Practice active listening:

One of the most important skills in selling is to be a good listener. Actively listening to your customer can help you understand their needs and expectations, which will ultimately help you build a better relationship with them. Take the time to ask open-ended questions, encourage your customer to talk about their personal needs, and use that information to form your response.

Personalize your approach:

There's so much noise in today's world. If you want to catch people's attention, you need to personalise your message so it resonates with them. So take the time to research your customers' needs and preferences, and tailor your approach accordingly. Use your research to demonstrate your understanding of their problems and frustrations, and show how your product or service can meet their unique needs.

Focus on building a relationship:

Building a relationship with your customer is one of the most important aspects of selling. Focus on building trust and rapport with your customer by being genuine, helpful, and respectful. Remember that your ultimate goal is to help your customer solve their problems, and not just to make a sale.

Improve your communication skills:

Famous direct response marketer Jay Abraham once said, "Sometimes the best copy to sell a horse is 'Horse for sale.'" In other words, being clear about your message will often lead to more sales than wild claims about your products. Good salespeople are clear and concise in their messaging, use the right tone of voice and language, and know when to ask for clarification or provide additional information.

Implementing these techniques can quickly transform you from an average salesperson to a razor-sharp persuasion master... something you can use for the rest of your life to open doors and supercharge your success. But there are many more that will help you progress as fast as humanly possible. My team and I can help you learn ALL of these crucial skills – in fact, we'll even pay you to learn as a sales agent for Community Collective. It's a rare opportunity to learn from the best in the business.

Imagine being mentored by some of the top minds in sales, being able to pick the brains of multi-millionaires who have done it all before, working with some of the biggest brands in the country like Woolworths and Hello Fresh, and gaining access to a world-class training program that cost $500k to develop. You'll fast-track your pathway to success and become an unstoppable machine who excels in everything you do!

4 SENTENCES YOU CAN SAY TO ANY RECRUITER THAT'LL HAVE THEM EATING OUT OF THE PALM OF YOUR HAND

I get it. You're young, ambitious, and driven. You might not be sure exactly what you want to do yet (which is completely normal, by the way,). But what you DO know is that you want to be successful. And that inevitably means you need to learn how to interview well.

So I'm going to give you some tips to impress recruiters, even when you have no experience or qualifications that are relevant to the job.

The first thing you should remember is that an interview is not just about your experience or qualifications. It's about showcasing your personality, attitude, and potential. Recruiters want to know you're a good fit for the company culture and have the potential to grow and develop within the organisation.

One way to do this is to prepare for the interview ahead of time. Research the company and its values, and come up with specific examples of how your skills and experience align with the company's mission and goals.

You could say something like "From my research, I understand you value [insert value], which is something that really resonates with me because [insert the reason why you like their values]." This shows you're proactive and have a genuine interest in both the company and the role you're applying for.

P.S. you don't need a degree or corporate experience

Another important tip is to demonstrate enthusiasm and energy during the interview. Start off by saying "I was really excited when I saw you had a job opening." This shows your interest in the role. You can back up this enthusiasm with positive body language. Smile, make eye contact, and engage with the interviewer.

Another excellent idea is to express your passion for the industry and your eagerness to learn and grow in the role. For example, you could say "I'm passionate about the [insert the name of the industry] industry and eager to learn and grow in my career." This demonstrates your positive attitude and willingness to contribute to the team. It also demonstrates you're serious about pursuing a career in the industry, so you're not likely to quit after a few months.

Asking questions is another fantastic way to show you're engaged and interested in learning more about the company and the role. So if you reach the end of the interview and the recruiter asks whether you have any questions, don't shake your head or say, "you've already answered them."

Instead, a great question to ask is "What does success look like in this role and how is it measured?" This shows you're focused on achieving results and want to understand how your performance will be evaluated. It also gives you the opportunity to learn more about the specific expectations and goals of the role!

Remember, while having experience and qualifications can certainly help, they are not the only factors that recruiters look for in a candidate. By showcasing your personality, attitude, and potential, you can make a strong impression and land your dream job.

Bonus tip: when you break it down, applying for any job is really about how well you can sell yourself... another reason I think learning sales is so valuable. It's a skill that will pop up time and time again throughout your career, regardless of which path you take!

THE CAREER PATH THAT'S PRODUCED MORE BILLIONAIRES THAN MEDICINE, LAW AND FINANCE COMBINED

The other day I listened to the recording of an interview with Mark Cuban and something caught my attention.

If you haven't heard of him, Mark is the billionaire owner of the Dallas Mavericks, a judge on the TV show Shark Tank, and one of the sharpest business minds on the planet. Mark was asked what he would do if he had to re-make his fortune from scratch.

His answer?

"Be a salesperson... Once you learn how to sell, you can always start a business [because] you're an entrepreneur at heart."

This resonated with me because it's the same advice I'd give to young people who want to be successful, but aren't quite sure how to achieve that success. Mark and I aren't the only ones.

Richard Branson, the billionaire founder of Virgin Group, started his career selling records out of the boot of his car. Mary Kay Ash, the founder of Mary Kay Cosmetics, began her career selling books door-to-door. Michael Dell, the founder of Dell Technologies, sold newspaper subscriptions as a teenager, then worked as a salesperson for a computer company while he was in college. The list goes on and on.

In fact, a much shorter list would be successful people who have never sold anything in their life. You'd be hard-pressed to find a billionaire without sales skills. They're about as rare as a vegan at a sausage sizzle.

P.S. you don't need a degree or corporate experience

So why is sales so valuable? Because it's not just about selling products or services. It's about persuading people to take action, whether that's buying a product, supporting an idea, or following a vision.

This ability to persuade can propel you forward in just about any career path you choose. It can help you secure a new job, unlock a pay rise, or gain funding for a business venture. It can open more doors than you ever thought possible.

It's also a skill that, once you've learned it, will stick with you for life. Like a secret weapon you use to achieve your goals and overcome any obstacles in your way. And that's why sales is responsible for more billionaires than medicine, law and finance combined.

WHY “JUST STARTING A BUSINESS AND BECOMING AN ENTREPRENEUR” IS THE WORST IDEA YOU’VE EVER HAD

If you’re like a lot of young people, you’ll have ambitions to one day start your own business. As a successful entrepreneur whose life was changed by his business, I’m in favour of encouraging people to start a company. But I’m also in favour of helping people understand the risks involved.

Your YouTube feed is probably dominated by fake gurus selling every get-rich-quick scheme under the sun. Drop shipping. Affiliate marketing. Ecommerce. Trading crypto. AI funnels. The list is endless.

But so many of these gurus are scammers who haven’t really achieved success themselves. They rent lamborghinis and mansions for the weekend to make their ad, then go back to their studio apartment and scam people from their laptop. You need to be very careful about taking advice from people like this who simply want to sell you their course or high-ticket coaching program. Instead, you should take a look at the statistics around starting a business.

The reality is that most businesses fail. In fact, according to the Australian Bureau of Statistics, 60% of small businesses close their doors within 3 years.

Other studies suggest that the number is even higher. According to research firm Startup Genome, 11 out of 12 start-ups fail. So starting a business is responsible for FAR more failures than success stories.

That’s because most people who start a business don’t have the required skills to make it work. They aren’t adept at managing, don’t know how to lead, and can’t sell their product or service. It’s a recipe for disaster!

So if you’re not yet ready to start a business – but want to do it someday – what would I recommend?

TAKE SOME TIME TO FIGURE OUT:

A

What Sort Of Business You Want To Start

B

What Sort Of Skills You Need To Make It Successful

Now you don't need to learn every single skill in existence to build a successful business. You can find and hire people to fill gaps and complement your own experience and knowledge.

But it's important to get a strong grounding in skills such as sales, marketing, leadership and time management. All of these will increase your chances of becoming a successful entrepreneur.

You should also consider getting some experience in the industry you're interested in. This will give you valuable insights into the skills required to be successful in that niche. You'll have a chance to identify common problems in the industry, too, and create products and services that could solve those problems.

Finally, don't underestimate the importance of networking and building relationships, especially with people who have been in your shoes before. Finding a successful entrepreneur to mentor you can provide valuable insights, help you avoid common mistakes, and put you on the right path to success.

If you put them together, all of these things will prepare you to run your own business. And you'll have a much higher chance of making it a success when you do!

THE LITTLE-KNOWN 'SHORTCUT' TO EARN UP TO $20,833+ PER MONTH WORKING WITH COMPANIES LIKE WOOLWORTHS, HELLO FRESH AND RED CROSS (YOU DON'T NEED A DEGREE OR CORPORATE EXPERIENCE!)

Yes, you read that title correctly. It's time to discuss the potentially life-changing opportunity to earn up to $250k per year without a degree or experience. Before I give you more details, though, I want to tell you a short but important story about myself:

When I was 21, I moved to Australia with $500 to my name. I could barely speak English and had no friends or family here. In all honesty, I wasn't sure how long I'd last – but I was determined to give it my best shot.

I had ambitions to be a successful businessman – so I often went to the library to read books written by successful entrepreneurs. One of these books Was 'Rich Dad, Poor Dad' by Robert Kiyosaki.

If you haven't read it, I highly recommend checking it out. Of course, if you'd rather the TL;DR version, here it is:

If you want to become rich and successful, then learn how to sell. It's the #1 skill in business and in life. Once you know how to sell, start your own business and use the cash flow to buy more assets such as property that make you money. These assets will help grow your wealth exponentially and you'll become wealthier than most people you know.

P.S. you don't need a degree or corporate experience

Shortly after reading the book, I quit my job handing out fliers (for $17/hour) and started as a salesperson. I immediately fell in love with the job. Never has a decision improved my life so much, in such a short space of time.

Not only did I make a LOT more money... but I skyrocketed my confidence, improved my communication skills, became more focused and determined to achieve success, and completely got over my fear of rejection. I felt more in control and confident in my life than ever.

Fast-forward to today, and I've followed the exact path to success laid out in 'Rich Dad, Poor Dad.' I run several businesses, own millions of dollars worth of property, and have as much time as I want to follow my passions.

Why am I telling you all this? Because there's a good chance you're in a similar position to what I was. And I want to help you access the shortcut I never had... by giving you the opportunity to get paid while learning sales, leadership and time management skills from myself and some of the sharpest entrepreneurial minds in Australia.

What Am I Talking About?

My company, Community Collective, is on the hunt for new sales agents. You'll have the chance to work with some of the biggest companies in Australia like Woolworths, Hello Fresh and the Red Cross.

The best part is, you don't need a degree or experience to apply. We've invested $500k in our training program to ensure it's second to none. You'll have all the training and support you need to earn up to $250k per year!

Not only will you master the art of selling... but you'll also unlock and develop your leadership potential, reprogram your mind to crush self-doubt and limiting beliefs, build habits to advance your career, and skyrocket your confidence to levels you never thought possible. You'll have a skillset to skip the corporate ladder and propel yourself towards a lifetime of success!

Ready To Apply?

You don't need a 5-page cover letter or resume to submit an application. You just need a hunger for success, a willingness to grow, a never-say-die attitude... and 15 seconds of your time.

If you're ready to apply – or you want to find out more information and see if you're a good fit for the role – check out our job application page below. Fair warning, though: positions are limited and will fill up FAST.
